Twenty Ninth Sunday in Ordinary Time 15th & 16th October 2016

Be persistent in prayer

In this parish, we have long been persistent in our requests to God, and I believe that God has answered our prayers many times. We continue to be so, and the formality and careful reading of the names of those we pray for, over and over again, is a sign of our persistence. But we must also heed Paul, and find ways to be persistent in delivering our message of the Good News.

Parishioners may look to find a way to be persistent role models of the message of Jesus in our workplace, in the streets, and even in our homes. Our faith in God, supported by our parish family, must be like Aaron, persistent in holding our hands up to God. Pleading with God and fighting with confidence that we can defeat the social ills of our day like poverty and war. How can we be of service to other members of our own community, of the Poynton community and of the wider community? We must always be open to the ways God our loving Father shows us. Prayer is a time to ask but also a time to listen.
